“ I just found out, I am so sorry. What a strong and beautiful soul, you will be so missed by everyone. Emma, hold on to the precious memories you both made this last year, and nurture that inner strength I know you got from your momma. She definitely helped me through a very rough patch in my life, and for that I will be forever grateful. We should all aspire to be as selfless and courageous in the face of adversity. B.B. Roxanne 💜

“ Even though I only knew you from Messaging on facebook I felt that we were friends. It hurts my heart that you are gone as hard as you fought to be here for your family and especially Emma and Ryan. Anytime I needed a lift up from this terrible thing called cancer that we were experiencing you always made it better. You will be terribly terribly missed by many. Hold strong Emma, your momma was a beautiful person inside and out and always will be. I am sorry you all have to go through this. My deepest deepest thoughts and prayers to you all. She will missed terribly. I am so sorry.

“ Beautiful Roxanne, my sister redhead. Though we shared only a small number of family gatherings years ago, the past few years talking with you via Facebook and messaging rooted you firmly in my heart. Your positivity, empathy, authenticity and love could be felt even online. You celebrated happy moments with me, brought me a laugh and smile more times than I could possibly count, and comforted me in my times of upset and loss. You blessed my life. My heart is breaking for everyone who loves you and whom you loved so dearly in return. But love never ends and we will all meet again. Until then, fly high, Rox. Heaven is more beautiful with you, its newest angel, in it. 💔💔💖

“ I was there with you when you were born. You were an old soul and patiently tolerated being bathed and examined before being returned to your mother. No crying or upset, just curiosity and love in your face. Unfortunately I was there for your last breath as well. You struggled valiantly through the pain and fear of death. When it was over a calm peaceful look was on your precious face. I can only say I love you dearly and always will . You were a blessing to my life and your mom shared yow with me. Now we have your daughter to love and cherish and we (your mom and I) cannot express our regret that we are unable to share our love with your other child Ryan. But should he change his mind there is still love and happiness to be shared with him. Your life was hard, short and unfair at times but you faced it with love and courage. You will always be a beautiful part of this entire family. And you still beat me to MomMom! I was supposed to be next! ❤️
